

Terrance Nelson.com

Media Advisory

July 2, 2009

NATIONAL CHIEF CANDIDATE MAKES CAMPAIGN PROMISE

National Chief Candidate Terrance Nelson, is proud to announce one of his campaign promises to the Indigenous people of Canada, if elected by the Chiefs to National Chief of the Assembly of First Nations, on July 22, 2009 in Calgary, Alberta.

Tired of having the Government of Canada, exploit the First Nations people for the resources and land, National Chief candidate Terrance Nelson is prepared to bring the Americans to Canada to compete for the resources of the Inuit and Dene, bypassing the government of Canada all together. Northern Canada is home to over a million square miles of resource wealth in a time when China, the United States, Russia and Denmark all need access to these resources. "The question is," said National Chief candidate Nelson, "Do you want to remain loyal to Canadians who have forced you into poverty and stolen your resources? Or are you prepared to listen to what Americans (and other countries) can offer you."

Chief Nelson wants to initiate a direct dialogue with the Americans and foreign countries and says the other Chiefs running for National Chief are just looking for a profit sharing agreement with the government of Canada, when really, Indigenous People of Canada should be negotiating as a sovereign nation, without Canada's input. Chief Nelson says "America is already looking north for solutions to their oil crisis but are the indigenous people in Canada willing to continue to allow Canadians to live off our resource wealth while Canada pays nothing to indigenous people? We will find out on July 22nd in Calgary."

About Chief Terrance Nelson:

Terrance Nelson has written five books: Genocide in Canada; Okijjida : The Warrior Society; Anishinabe Aki : Sovereignty and Sovereign Immunity in Treaty One; The TIE Creek Study : Petroforms in the Whiteshell, and The Ojibway Moccasin Game. In his work as a consultant, Nelson wrote many research documents including one on gaming called the New Buffalo. A prolific writer, Nelson graduated from the University of Manitoba in 1980 but already scored at the 4th year level in English subjects during his University entrance exam in 1977. Today he is self taught in computer literacy, economics and has written and produced many political videos. Nelson is a single parent and has brought up five children.

On the U.S. side, Terrance Nelson is vice-chair of the Grand Governing Council of the American Indian Movement and in Canada he is a spokesman of the Okijjida Warrior Society. Nelson is an avid reader and has read Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee by Dee Brown at least six times and he admits that he admires the redemption of Malcolm X.

Nelson is Ojibway, Lynx Clan, First Degree Mediwiwin, and has participated in the Sundance. Nelson has been elected Chief of Roseau River Anishinabe First Nation five times.

- 30 -

For more information: www.terrancenelson.com

Media & Communications Officer

Julie Lafreniere

(204) 292-6787

Julie@terrancenelson.com